STOCK GROWERS TO HAVE BUFFALO FEED AT FAIR

A real old-timers' feed of buffalo, with beans and coffee, will be staged by the Western Stock Growers' Association during the Stampede at Calgary. This was definitely decided upon at a meeting of the directors of that organization, held on Friday. The directors decided to get behind the Stampede whole-heartedly in helping to make it the greatest possible success.

Most of the prominent ranchers will bring in their own round-up wagons and on the day of the Stampede an old-time slap-up feed will be given, all visiting stockmen. A couple of buffalo, rams, etc., donated by the government, and to be cooked right on the spot just in the same manner as when the stately animals roamed the prairie.

In addition, A. E. Cross one of the directors of the association, who is the owner of 47 ranches, and president of the Calgary Brewing Company, will issue invitations to all stockmen to attend a "Dutch" lunch at the brewery. It is anticipated that quite 1,000 stockmen will accept the invitation.

CORONER DICIDES E. EVANS' DEATH PURELY ACCIDENTAL

A deep gloom has been cast over Edgerton district through a chain of distressing accidents with fatal results. Wednesday morning, June 4th, which caused the death of E. N. Evans, while he and other minor injuries.

Deceased had hitched four bronchos to a cultivator near where he was to cultivate and before reaching the field through some unknown cause, the team bolted and he was thrown among the teeth of the cultivator. The horses tore around across the field several times until they were finally tangled up in a wire fence which stopped them, and all this time deceased had been dragged around under the cultivator.

He was found by C. Knutson, who had driven out to see him on business. Mr. Knutson unbuckled the horses, receiving a nasty kick in the chest while so doing, and hurriedly drove to Edgerton to get medical help. Coroner Wallace of Wainwright was notified of the accident.

On arrival of the doctor at the scene of the accident, he found deceased's son, who had come to the rescue of his father, lying stretched out on the ground some distance from where the horses were tied to a tree. It was seen that E. N. Evans was dead, and that the doctor then turned his attention to the son. On examination he found that he was suffering from a broken thigh and bruises in the face caused by the kicking of the crazed bronchos. He was given the necessary treatment and taken home. Coroner Wallace arrived and decided that no inquest was necessary and death was pronounced due to fracture of the base of the skull.

Born in Montreal, Quebec, fifty-six years ago deceased moved to Edgerton from Saskatchewan about seven years ago, and has been ranching principally in horses during those years. He was a very capable horseman and took a great interest in everything agricultural, and had unlimited experience in the stock game. He leaves a wife and a son and daughter.

Start Will Be Made On Third Well Of B. P.'s

It is fully expected that the third hole for the British Petroleum Ltd. will be actually started some time this week, as everything is now practically ready to go.

Both Mr. Newton Emmens, the superintendent, and his chief assistant Mr. E. Lamb, are now actually in residence here, and are pushing things with all despatch so that no time will be lost in reaching production—which in view of the fact that both former wells of this company are "payers"—is almost assured.

The boilers have been tested by the government inspector, and it only remains for a few minor details to be arranged before the heavy-duty rig will be "hoisting her down."

The big camp has now been completed and also the derrick at the No. 4 site, and last week end a couple of expert drillers and a tool dresser arrived from the oil fields in the States.

The gas lines from well No. 1 to the various other sites are now in use, and the water pipes and tanks are installed as well as a large oil tank placed at the No. 2 well.

Mr. Lamb, who is to assist Mr. Emmens in this big project, comes to this new field highly recommended, he having been engaged among some of the largest oil producing fields in the States and other countries, and we give him welcome here in the hopes that his prediction of an assured large field for the Wainwright district will prove a verity.

MAPLE LEAF COMPANY LIKELY FIRST TO SPUD IN THIS SEASON

An old friend and a welcome one in the oil game returned to town last week end in person of Mr. Dave Credille, the driller who actually brought in the producing well for the Brit. Petroleum.

Pets. last fall, and who has been down in the States working on his own holdings all winter.

Mr. Credille will be drilling with the Campbell outfit on the Maple Leaf holdings near Fabyan, and in view of the fact that he is well acquainted with the oil sands of the district he is fairly confident that a well will be brought in very shortly.

Mr. Hugh Campbell, who has the contract with the Maple Leaf Co., arrived last week with his drilling crew. Upon his arrival he found that Superintendent Bersford of that concern had everything in readiness for them to install the machinery as it arrived at the well site at the hands of Mr. Norman King who had the contract for its removal from the site of its last work at the B. P. No. 2 well.

This well we learn from those in charge will be spudded in on Friday next, this proving to be a record installation, and the first well to spud in this season in this field.

The location of the well which is situated on L. S. 1 on 13-45-84, is an ideal spot. Natural gas which is used for heating, cooking and such uses, as well as under the 45 h. p. boilers, is being taken from the Imperial well at Fabyan (just one mile away) and water is received by gravitation from a splendid nearby spring which has been tapped.

The crew of nearly a dozen men are comfortably ensconced in a new bunkhouse, and the cook-house and other adjuncts are all completed.

The derrick is among the largest in the territory, being some 120 feet to the top, and it is confidently hoped that production will be reached within the next six to eight weeks.

CONSOLIDATED CO. AWAY TO GOOD START

Mr. A. Visser, who arrived with a building gang to erect the derrick and machinery for the Western Consolidated Co., is busy in the piling together of a standard rig for that concern on 20-45-6—the Morton farm.

Mr. Visser is a pioneer in the derrick building game, and built many years of the rigs operated by the drilling companies in the south of the province. He came here from Okla.

Three cars of material are on their way to the site and Mr. J. O. Williams, who is now superintending the work is hoping to put the big "walking beam" to work within a very short time.

OTHER OPERATORS GETTING REAL BUSY

Several carloads of stuff are hilled here from the coast, these being under the hand of the Mutual Oil Co., the Anglo-Wainwright Co., and the Sunburst Canadian Co., all of whom have now decided on their locations as to the placing of their first drills.

The Globe Drilling Co., who have now renewed their work at Millet, are arranging to enter this field as soon as another rig can be secured. It is learned on good authority that they have picked a site about midway between the British Petroleum No. 1 well and the well at Fabyan.

The big camp has now been completed and also the derrick at the No. 4 site, and last week end a couple of expert drillers and a tool dresser arrived from the oil fields in the States.

The gas lines from well No. 1 to the various other sites are now in use, and the water pipes and tanks are installed as well as a large oil tank placed at the No. 2 well.

Canadian Nat Rlws

Johnneen Duffy, Up-to-date Poet.

At one end of the long, rudely furnished Douglas school room presided the master; at the other, his assistant, the older, calmer, and more experienced of the two, the younger ones faced the master; the younger ones faced the assistant.

Shane O. Donnell, the biggest and most advanced pupil of the master's division, occupied the end seat. He was a fine, upstanding lad with a good brain. His ambition was to be a master himself some day. At the other end of the unpainted bench sat Mary Anne Duffy, oldest of the girls. Mary Anne was a little Irish beauty with light brown hair demurely braided, delicate features and very white skin except for very red cheeks. Shane, adored that he was, his adoration was still his own carefully guarded secret.

About halfway down the assistant's front row sat Mary Anne's small brother Johnneen, a slight little fellow with large head and dreamy dark eyes. As was customary in the country schools of that part of Ireland, the lessons were partly in English and partly in Gaelic.

Johnneen had a Gaelic primer, which at that particular moment was lying idly across his knees. Johnneen's eyes were set in a faraway stare, for he was listening to the master, who was loudly and excitedly declaiming Gaelic poetry to his advanced class. The little lad did not know why the master was doing it; neither could he follow all the meaning, but the sweep and surge and swing of the verse had him spellbound. It was his turn to read from the Gaelic primer, but that he knew nothing whatever until a stinging blow across his back from the assistant's cane brought him back with a jump and a whimper.

The master's rows were in a state of nudging, wriggling excitement, less over the poetry than over the announcement that had preceded it. The Gaelic League was to hold a fete at Letterkenney in a fortnight. Prizes were offered for poems in the elder tongue composed by school children. The master had just promised to take the author of the best poem in his school to the fete at his own expense.

The lucky winner would ride on a tram and stay all night in a hotel, besides experiencing all the delights of the festival itself.

Shane's head was up and his jaw had a firmness of set that bodied ill to less earnest competitors, but it was not of tram or of hotel or even of the fete that he was thinking. His dream was the gentle blue eyes of Mary Anne Duffy should shine approval on his deed. He had already chosen the wrecking of the Armada off the Irish coast as his theme, and he was determined to labor valiantly.

A week later Shane stayed after school to work at the poem. Mary Anne made an excuse of copying an exercise to linger also, and they walked home together.

"I'm sure and certain, Shane, as you will be the one to travel to Letterkenney with the master. Who else can write as well as you?"

"Would—would you be middlin' proud to think you was knowin' me, Mary Anne?"

"I would that, Shane."

A red wave surged up Shane's face to his very hair. From an inner pocket of his coat he drew forth a tawdry enamelled brooch, "I was buying you this bit brooch last fair day."

"O, Shane! it is the grandest fairing whatever! But you never gived it to me."

"I was playing ninepins with the boys—here embarrassment choked his utterance."

"You were playing ninepins—" she said.

"I was. The fairing fell out on me, and the boys were coddling me terrible, and I told them it was for no girl at all, but won off the man with the prizes which you throw hoops to get, and me to have no use for it."

"Barrin' the boys, would you be wishin' me to have it?"

"I would!" he asserted fervently.

"I could be keepin' it hid away until I go to America," she ventured.

"When I will be fair destroyed with thinking long of home, it will mind me of an old fashioned schoolmate."

Shane, fairly crazed with delight yet cautious withal, handed her the brooch.

"Do not be revealing it on me, berran, somebody might crack it in a letter."

"I will not reveal who gived me the elegant bit brooch."

Shane wriggled with delight and relief.

"I was staying late, Shane, for the chance to ask a kindness of you."

"Put a name on it, Mary Anne, and it is yours."

"It's about Johnneen. Some folks do be thinking him not quite right in his mind, because he acts so queer; but he is right, Shane; you know he is right and fair intelligent."

"He is, Mary Anne, but he's got his own way of being smart, which sometimes looks like foolishness to the rest. Do you mind when the cow tossed him out of byre door for looking into her eyes to see what she was thinking?"

"Yes, Shane, and I mind the day when he fell out of the tail of the cart into the river because he was so took with the pretty swirls in the water he forgot to hold on."

"What do be his trouble now?"

"Worse nor anything yet, he makes queer talk to himself while herding the cow, and our mother fears him to be under some enchantment. Now would you unbeknownst to him creep up and see what you make of the matter?"

"I would do more than that for you, Mary Anne, as you well know."

Shane left the girl at her own door, and proceeded to stalk Johnneen by a series of boyish manoeuvres in which he took legitimate satisfaction. At last he lay flat among some bushes not more than twenty feet from the boy.

Sure enough, the lad was lifting a long to himself. The chant was irregular at first with many repetitions and frequent dead stops. Shane caught a Gaelic word here and there. At last Johnneen mounted a stone and delivered himself of the incantation complete.

Shane listened spellbound to the point of forgetting himself and even Johnneen. It was only when the little lad hopped down from his rock and returned to the grazing cow that Shane remembered where he was and why. "The scalpeen!" he muttered below his breath. "The outrageous little scalpeen to be finding all that in his own head."

"If I was to wear out me mouth tryin' to sing what comes of the bird's nib, that would be me poem. Johnneen is the blackbird himself singin' away."

"It's perfect Gaelic verse in a most fine and uncommon verse," pronounced the master, and coming from so well a lad, the fella will go mad over him, and the praise and presents he will be receivin'—"

"Blessed Mother!" cried Mrs. Duffy. "It was to be seen on all this long he has boots, and I will be bakin' him a grand new pantaloons so he will look grand at the fete." With that the hustled Johnneen back to the cottage.

Mary Anne waited to thank the master, and then joined Shane, who was waiting shamefacedly outside the school door.

"Will you be great with me any more, Mary Anne, when your brother a mere infant, is excellin' me to smithereens with his bit poetries?"

He asked her anxiously.

"O, Shane! It was that illigant and generous in you to give up to Johnneen! How could you be doing that same? Why, it was like the master might have done, or Robert Emmet,

Then he rolled over, and his face was down on his arms among the prickly whins. The world-long battle between conscience and desire ended in his soul. His severely dyed that Johnneen had no idea of his own performance other than as a sinful amusement that kept him in disgrace with his family. And it wasn't shutting the doors of festival wonder on himself that he minded most; it was the shame before Mary Anne Duffy of being out-poetted in the contest by her brother of the same class.

Shane emerged from the moral contest on the right side, but rough and excited from the inner tussle. He jumped up, leaped the ditch, and faced the startled herdsboy. "Did you find them poetries inside yourself?"

Johnneen nodded wretchedly.

"Take up your cow and come along, said Shane."

"I was—didn't no harm, Shane—"

"Get up you animal!"

Johnneen obeyed Leaving the cow in the byre, Shane marched the boy to his home hearth. Mrs. Duffy and Mary Anne were knitting by the peafire. "What has come across Johnneen?" breathlessly inquired his mother.

Shane shook him fiercely by the collar. "We must be taking him this minute to the master, whom I believe to be lingerin' yet at the school. Come you along and Mary Anne without waitin' for naught."

Johnneen whimpered and hung back but his mother and Mary Anne each took a hand, and resistance was futile. The master looked up in mild astonishment from the stack of exercise books that he was correcting.

"Master," shouted Shane. "This wee gossoon has made a Gaelic poem to beat any in the whole school! You will be takin' him to Letterkenney."

I doubt not the scalpeen will be comin' back with the best prize of the fete. "Holy saints!" ejaculated the mother. "He got it off the fairies! Mary Anne, what was I tellin' you since?"

Johnneen started with relaxed jaw; his world was whirling round him like a witch's dance, an agony of shyness he made a dash for the door, but was captured and brought back by Shane.

"Master, you find them three rocks out in the way, named Old Wicket And you mind the saying that once in seven years, at sunrise they may be startin' to the shore but if any turns eyes on them they must go to their places for another seven years of waitin'!"

If they was successful, it's three old women they would be, fit only for the almshouse. It's about them cratures the lad made his poetries. Speak it out Johnneen, for the master."

The boy began timidly enough, but rose to the real orator's exhilaration from having an audience:

"We are three harmless old souls. Tomorrow we try again for the safe side sky."

O kind people, look not upon us. Turn your faces to the west and not to the east.

For, if unseen we reach the sand, women we are again.

Harmless old women doing ill to none It's weary we are of waves and storms. It's weary we are of shellfish and the tide sky."

Oh, for the turf fire of the almshouse! Oh, for the faces of other old women, wrinkled but kind!

Oh, to be kneeling in church of a Sunday out of the wind to pray! Oh, to leave our bones in the cosy churchyard at last!"

Mrs. Duffy frankly dabbed her eyes with the corner of her apron. I will not be looking; and once they are landed it's meself that will be bringin' of 'em home for a cup of tay."

Mary Anne turned to Shane, "But your poem is the grand sounding one altogether. It cannot be that our Johnneen's is better than yours. When I hear yours I'm thinkin' what a grand composition it do be, and with Johnneen's I'm forgettin' all exceptin' them poor old cratures wearin' out there in the salt water."

"Mary Anne, you've said it your own self. Meanin' to praise mine, you are yet condemnin' it as it deserves. Hear you that blackbird on you when?"

"If I was to wear out me mouth tryin' to sing what comes of the bird's nib, that would be me poem. Johnneen is the blackbird himself singin' away."

"It's perfect Gaelic verse in a most fine and uncommon verse," pronounced the master, and coming from so well a lad, the fella will go mad over him, and the praise and presents he will be receivin'—"

"Blessed Mother!" cried Mrs. Duffy. "It was to be seen on all this long he has boots, and I will be bakin' him a grand new pantaloons so he will look grand at the fete." With that the hustled Johnneen back to the cottage.

Mary Anne waited to thank the master, and then joined Shane, who was waiting shamefacedly outside the school door.

"Will you be great with me any more, Mary Anne, when your brother a mere infant, is excellin' me to smithereens with his bit poetries?"

He asked her anxiously.

"O, Shane! It was that illigant and generous in you to give up to Johnneen! How could you be doing that same? Why, it was like the master might have done, or Robert Emmet,

Then he rolled over, and his face was down on his arms among the prickly whins. The world-long battle between conscience and desire ended in his soul. CANADIAN EXHIBIT

AT WEMBLEY PRAISED

MONTREAL.—That Canada's building and exhibits which it houses are the most striking in the British Empire Exhibition is the opinion expressed by the Hon. W. C. Nichol, Lieutenant Governor of British Columbia, who has returned from an extended tour of Europe. Mr. Nichol said the display had made a truly tremendous impression on the English people.

"The Canadian building was the only one complete when the exhibition opened," Mr. Nichol continued, and indeed two weeks after the opening began, many of the other exhibitions were still incomplete. British Columbia was still represented with an exhibit of ores, fruits, lumber and native industries."

CAN WE AFFORD IT?

Commissioner Yorath of Edmonton
in a statement regarding high schools has given life to a belief held by many for some time past. Commissioner Yorath, in effect, says, that the time has arrived when it will be necessary for the parent to pay direct fees for the secondary education of his children.

No sane person desires to see the educational facilities of the rising generation cut down. All will agree that as regards producing the best and most intelligent type of citizenship the high school is probably the most forceful means at our disposal. There are very few people but who will agree that secondary education is a good thing.

The cause of the discussion is the cost of it. Due to various causes in which boom days and dry years are blended, Edmonton is hard put to it to find enough money to finance all of its undertakings, high schools included.
Commissioner Yorath is opposed in his belief by the Minister of Education, who says he does not want to see a condition of affairs where only the sons and daughters of the well to do may take advantage of a high school education. This is a laudable viewpoint and expression.

At the present time the money for education, public and high school, is derived by the taxation of the masses.
While the property holder pays the most, there is an educational poll tax, so that in some degree or other, few males over 21 years, escape contributing something towards the educational bill. Therefore, the question in a nutshell is, to what extent is the state responsible as regards the education of its children? That every child shall attend school between the ages of seven and fourteen is a matter of law,

but after fourteen, what?

The age of fourteen is a recognised year of change. At this age the average boy or girl has received sufficient instruction to permit them to go out into the world and "work". The years between fourteen and twenty-one,
should be, or could very profitably be,
years of preparation. Preparation that will smooth out the rough spots and give them the necessary skill to obtain employment and make useful citizens.
Naturally the years, of preparation should be devoted to the subject of future tasks. Therefore the boy who wishes to become an engineer, will find a good engineer's shop the best place for training. This training, augmented with night classes specializing of the trade, should prove as efficacious to him as two or three years spent in high school. The same application to other trades. This is not arguing that a high school student does not make a better apprentice than one without high school training—they do.
To the boy or girl intent upon entering one of the professions, a high school education, is of course, absolutely necessary.

The problem is not at all confined to the city. It has long been known that it takes all the money paid by local residents to keep Wainwright schools running, leaving very little indeed for other expenditures. Locally it has got to the point where it is necessary to charge high school fees for pupils attending high school from other districts the districts from which they come being charged with the amount.
Wainwright people feel that any additional tax would be the proverbial
"last straw". Therefore if the cost of conducting the schools continues to advance, there may rise up here a "Moses" who will advocate the payment of high school fees.

THE WOMAN DOES THE BUYING

Behind by far the larger number of sales made there is a woman's influence. Men are affected in their retail buying by their wives more than they admit at first blush. It is usually only when his wife tells him that his collars are wearing out that a man goes to a haberdasher's for a new stock. That is also true of much of the balance of his purchases of wearing apparel. In regard to things for the children and the table, the "lady of the house" is the sole arbiter. She decides when to buy if it is a mop for the kitchen sink or a piano.

An amazing amount of money is sent to other cities each year by Wainwright buyers. Far fields look green, but upon closer examination they are no more beautiful than the hills near-
by. Goods bought in Winnipeg or Toronto are no better than goods that can be bought in the stores of Wainwright. Visitors to this town invariably comment upon the excellent stores we have here, and with reason. Every class of retail business is represented here, with as large a range of stock as will be found in places of much larger population. Buyers at home can see what they are getting, they are able to estimate at once whether the price is right, and if the goods are not by chance satisfactory the store and its manager are here to deal with. There is much more likelihood of obtaining satisfaction by buying in Wainwright than by sending abroad for purchases.

Every purchase made in your home city helps trade, helps to maintain employment, makes conditions better for the bread-winner in every home.
If the women—and the men too—will think in terms of what is best for Wainwright and actually best for themselves, they will decide to buy in Wainwright.

Leave it to the people of other business centres to build those cities
up. It is our duty to make conditions better in Wainwright. We can do that by patronizing home industry, home products and home stores.

Ceasing to do new things, and to think new thoughts—that is real growing old.

Patience is holding out, perseverance is holding out, faith is holding up.

He informed his sweetheart, aged twenty-four years, that he was sending her a rose for every year of her age. To the florist he gave an order to send to the lady two dozen of the finest roses he could procure.

"He is a good customer," remarked the florist to the assistant who was packing the bouquet "so put in an extra half-dozen." The engagement was broken.

THE TRENCH SILO

The increasing attention given to mixed farming and consequently to the keeping of live stock, necessitating as it does a plentiful supply of fodder, has led to the trial and adoption of the trench silo, as a substitute for above-ground and pit silo construction. The trench silo consists simply of an excavation in which the cut up corn or other ensilage crop can be placed and consolidated. In a soil which when excavated can be held to hold the season's water supply, it has been found comparatively easy to provide these requirements at a minimum of cost.

The Superintendent of the Dominion Experimental at Swift Current, Saskatchewan, describes in his report for last year a trench silo having a capacity of 150 tons. The dimensions given are 80 feet long 10 feet deep, and 14 feet wide. The excavations so located and designed that the silage may be taken from it with a horse and stone boat, and fed to cattle in nearby corrals. Almost the entire work was done with teams and scrapers hand work being required only to smooth down the sides, which are practically perpendicular. In the process of excavation, both ends were sloped so as to allow the teams handling the ploughs and scrapers to go in and out without difficulty. When the trench was nearly finished, one end was dug down almost straight, leaving a fourteen foot chain attached to the plough, and by turning the plough on its side, or nearly so, it was found possible to get the walls perpendicular with very little hand digging. A certain amount of the excavated material was left to form a bank around all sides of the excavation, including that end used as a driveway, so that surface water would not flow in. The roof of cross poles, wire and straw was constructed, so as to shed the water beyond the edge of the bank. The total cost of the excavation and roof was less than $100, and was made up of 160 hours manual labour at thirty cents an hour; 240 hours labor at ten cents an hour, and wire and straw for the roof valued at $26. The observation made by the Superintendent in his report, that an upright silo of the same capacity would not only cost from five to seven times as much for construction but is more expensive both to fill and to empty.

EDUCATING BOY OFF FARM

WINNIPEG, (Special).—"Could and farmer in Ontario have made a success of his farm if he ran it the way many Western farmers run theirs? How could a cowless, chickenless, sowless farm be made to pay anywhere?" asked Richard Willis, successful thousand-acre farmer of Turtle Mountain at the Mortgage Association meeting.

"Our educational system is working the wrong way," he declared. "We pay big taxes for higher education and we are educating our boys off the farm instead of on it. I know because I've got two that have been educated off it."

No other life equalled that of the farmer, free from debts and worry, Mr. Ellis said, and looked the part. "We don't become millionaires," he continued, "but no millionaire can enjoy himself any better than the farmer in the condition I have described." Just to show what cows and chickens do the farm must in several cases be told of a man who circumstances had forced into the purchase of a cow in 1916, because he could not make grain pay his living. The woman of the house had looked after the cow and chickens and since that time had clothed herself and two children on the egg and cow money and had $4,000 in the bank.

"There is a better opportunity for the young man to-day who wants to farm than there ever was," Mr. Willis said, and pointed out that it was possible to buy improved land with good buildings on it at very low prices. He suggested the financial interests should make it their business to go in to the immigration end of the problem. The thing to do was to bring good people and settle them, on the improved farms and he suggested that the loaning companies must have plenty of such farms that they could afford to sell at very low prices, and go to some trouble in picking just the right kind of men.

"Ladies' evening frocks cost an awful amount."
"And there's so very little in them."

CROP RETURNS

DISAPPOINTING

LONDON, June 4.—Although in 1923 the Dominion reaped the "most abundant harvest on record the returns to the Canadian farmer were disappointing," said E. H. Godfrey, head of the agricultural statistics division of the bureau of statistics, Ottawa, in a paper read on his behalf before the Farmers' Club, here yesterday. The paper was a study of costs of production of the Canadian farm and conveyance of produce to English ports.

"But this disappointment," Mr. Godfrey continues, "was due largely to the general excellence of the wheat crop throughout the world, which had the effect of reducing the price. This is a rare occurrence and we may look for a rise in price when world conditions of wheat revert to the normal."

Commencing April 16th, the Canadian Pacific Railway, having in mind the expressed wishes of the majority of its patrons, has decided to revert to the custom of permitting no smoking in observation cars of its transcontinental trains.

The production of steel ingots and castings in Canada during the month of February amounted to 70,883 tons, an advance of 72 per cent over the 41,509 tons produced in January. The increase was almost wholly accounted for by the rise in the quantity of open-hearth basic steel ingots made for the use of producers.

Canadian farm products exported to the United States during February totalled $2,440,208, an increase of $1,579 over February last year, according to a report published by the Bureau of Statistics. Wheat exports to the United States were valued at $1,017,714 in February, as against $26,157 in February of the previous year.

Under the agreement with the Imperial Government and the Empire Settlement Act, Canada, spent $39,657 in assisted passages for some 2,053 British immigrants in the fiscal year just closed. In the past four years the Dominion Government has spent nearly $1,400,000 in promoting immigration from Great Britain to Canada.

By arrangements made by Hon. George Hendey, Minister of Agriculture, a trial shipment of cow and steers will be made in the near future to Japan for the purpose of testing out the possibilities of a market for Alberta's livestock in that country. It is also the purpose of the department to send with the shipment a qualified investigator who will look into the possibilities of a market for all Alberta farm products.

For the first time in the past two or three years the Saskatchewan Co-operative Creameries Limited is shipping butter in carload lots direct to the cities of the United States. A carload shipment was recently made from Saskatoon to Philadelphia. Two carloads were also shipped to Chicago, where they realized good prices. Each car contained between 25,000 and 30,000 pounds of Saskatchewan butter.

Speaking at Quebec recently, E. W. Beatty, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, summarized the magnitude of the operations of the Company. It has 15,000 miles of railway in Canada and controls 5,102 miles in the United States. It owns and operates telegraph and express systems, 13 hotels, 16 bungalow camps and rest houses, and has in commission on the Atlantic and Pacific, Canadian lakes and the British Columbia coast, 81 ships aggregating approximately 450,000 gross tons. Its personnel varies in numbers with business conditions from 65,000 to 100,000 employees in all branches of the service.

What must constitute a record in the rapid handling of an important consignment from the Orient was established recently by the Canadian Pacific Railway when shipping a quantity of silk from Yokohama to New York. The consignment, which was the largest forwarded from Asia since the recent slump in the silk market, left Yokohama on March 22nd on the Canadian Pacific steamer "Empress of Asia." Specially stowed for prompt discharge on arrival at Vancouver, the shipment was so rapidly transferred to the waiting train that only 13 1/2 minutes per car elapsed between the docking of the ship and the departure of the fast freight and delivery was made at New York at midnight April 4th, the through time from Yokohama to New York being but 13 days, 8 hours and 13 minutes, calendar time.

RAILWAY EXECUTIVE HAS METEORIC RISE

W. M. Neal Appointed Assistant to Vice-President of Canadian Pacific

At 38 years of age Assumes Important Position at Montreal Head Office of Big Transportation Company.

Announcement was made recently by Grant Hall, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, of the appointment of W. M. Neal as assistant to the vice-president, to succeed the late James Manson. Mr. Neal undertook his new duties as assistant to the vice-president of the Canadian Pacific on March 17th, a significant date for him, being of Irish descent.

Although still a comparatively young man, Mr. Neal is regarded as one of the most capable and promising of the upper group of officials in the service of the Canadian Pacific. His rise in the service during his 23 years of employment with the company has been little less than a meteoric ascent of rapid promotions, owing to his capacity for hard work and intimate grasp of railway work.

W. M. Neal entered the service of the Canadian Pacific Railway in January, 1902, as a clerk in the superintendent's office at Toronto. In March of the same year he was transferred to the office of the general superintendent at Toronto.

He was transferred to the Winnipeg office in September, 1904, as stenographer and clerk in the office of the superintendent of transportation there. In 1905 he was made chief clerk in the office of the superintendent at Toronto, and in March of the same year he was sent to the general superintendent's office at Winnipeg as clerk, and in January, 1910, he was appointed chief clerk of the car service department at Winnipeg, and in May, 1915, he was transferred to the same position in Montreal.

In January, 1916, Mr. Neal was appointed car service agent of the Eastern Division, with offices at Montreal, and in June of the same year he was promoted assistant superintendent of Montreal terminals. In November, 1916, he became acting superintendent of the car service department at Montreal.

He was appointed general secretary of the Canadian Railway Association, National Defence, on October 23, 1917, in which capacity he did such notable work as to attract the attention of all having business to do with that important department during the latter years of the war.

In February, 1920, he was appointed assistant, general superintendent at Montreal, and in April of the same year he was promoted to undertake a similar position there. Two years later, in July, 1922, he was appointed general superintendent for the Algoma division, with headquarters at North Bay, which position he vacated to take up his duties as assistant to the vice-president.

Mr. Neal was born in Toronto in 1886 and was educated at the Public and Wesley High Schools there. He was married in 1910 to Miss Francis J. Scott of Renfrew.

The U. F. W. A. are holding a sale of home cooking and afternoon tea in the restroom on Saturday afternoon June 21st. All are welcome.

Mr. and Mrs. V. C. Lamb, arrived from Spencer, W. Virginia, on Saturday last and have taken up residence in town. Mr. Lamb is the assistant supt. for the British Petroleum Ltd.

The advt. appears on another page with regard to the herding and pound bylaw which is to be enforced by the town as soon as possible. This will surely give the garden a much better chance than heretofore!

OUR MISSION

To make the world some better For the work that we have done; A little less of Shadow. And a little more of Sun. To make this life more happy As the fleeting days go by. By causing less of Sorrow, And giving more of Joy.

FOR YOU

Sometimes in this old world of ours, You feel a trifle blue; But when the dark clouds scatter And sunshine filters through, You'll find a ray that's shining Just especially for you.

Education is the formation of such habits of thought and action as will enable us to live sanely and happily, to know how to make knowledge when we need it, and to be real service to the community of which we are part.
